COVID mask guidelines for Winter Semester

- Masks are optional for indoor spaces (including classrooms, laboratories, and conference rooms) unless otherwise directed.
 - The use of cloth masks when working with highly toxic or reactive chemicals or when working with a Risk Group 2 or higher biological agent is discouraged. Disposable masks are preferred to prevent accidental exposure to laboratory hazards.
 - Disposable face masks may be purchased at the Life Sciences Stockroom (1100 LSB).

COVID-19 Case Management

BYU students and employees attending classes or working on campus are required to report a positive diagnosis of COVID-19 to BYU. The result may be reported via this form. Students who are instructed to isolate or quarantine should contact their professors. Employees who are instructed to isolate or quarantine should contact their supervisor.

Current information on BYU guidelines for isolation and quarantine can be found on the university COVID-19 website.

Travel guidelines

Vaccination is not required to receive approval for domestic travel. However, if faculty, staff or students voluntarily disclose to their supervisor that they are fully vaccinated, domestic travel may be approved in accordance with current BYU policies. All others may be approved for domestic travel by following current BYU policies and COVID-19 testing protocols described on the university Covid-19 website. All individuals traveling domestically must comply with the COVID-19 requirements of the destination jurisdiction.

International travel continues to require full vaccination and approval from the international vice president. All business-related international travel should be coordinated through BYU Purchasing and Travel. Assistance for personal international travel is not available at this time.

Events and visitors

- Campus events may be planned and scheduled according to pre-pandemic processes and current BYU policies.
- Visitors and volunteers are allowed on campus according to pre-pandemic BYU policies. Visitors and volunteers need to abide by current BYU COVID-19 policies.
